See this assessment by Nate Silver of the NYTimes: <http://fivethirtyeight.blogs.nytimes.com/2011/10/07/police-clashes-spur-coverage-of-wall-street-protests/>

Interest in Occupy protesters increased after clashes with the police. At some point, these guys will get the message that they need to get arrested to get noticed.

I know at our last meeting, we were instructed not to make contact with Occupy about the upcoming Menorah event and that OEM was going to work with Police to clear the square.....The installation process for the menorah is scheduled to begin on Dec. 14 with a Dec. 20th event date, is this still our plan of operation or do you want me to try and move the menorah lighting to West Shore Park?

Thanks,

Fran

Roz:

I am not aware of any updates, and am concerned about that issue as well, thus Gus' email last week to everyone.

I have cc: Gus and Fran on this email to see if either one of them can shed any light.

Thanks!

They had a permit to be there only until 9. Police were going to tell them to leave but will not be forcing them to leave, given the occupy situation. These are college students there for one night.

Peter and Tomi,
Got a call from blogger. Said that a bunch of college kids were planning on camping out at City Hall (on war memorial plaza) tonight to raise awareness for homelessness. She said they were asked by the police to leave, or be arrested.

Are either of you aware of this? I had not heard this was happening.

I know the city has a relaxed attitude towards camping in public places these days.

Please advise. (I'm also checking with Police PIO.)

Hey Kali,

Hope all is well.....

What's up with this Occupy Baltimore movement? Can't we do what Mayor Bloomberg did in NY and get rid of the camp? The whole thing is pretty ridiculous. Seems more like a refugee/homeless camp.....

Andy

Sincerely,

Jennifer Lester

Kaliope, every morning I get to watch the city trucks and workers out there cleaning up McKeldin fountain site. Right now two trucks and a couple of workers sweeping/picking up trash. Yesterday I was in NYC watching downtown workers once again having lunch in Zuccoti Park...

Yes we agree.

Its what citys are struggling with all over the country with this movement (as you know).

Thanks. Is it legal to live/camp in a city park? There's a difference between freedom of speech and what I see every day!

Hey Brian

I received your message regarding Occupy Baltimore.

Understood.

As you know it's a national problem and we are addressing what we can do every day and monitoring other cities.
